Company caves in to community

Crofton residents thank Huck's for canceling plans to sell beer

BY NICK TABOR
 NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

The testy relationship between Huck's, the company that recently took over a popular convenience store in the center of Crofton, and the town's long-time residents nearly got much worse when the Illinois-based company announced plans to apply for a beer license.

Last week, every member of Crofton's city council stated they didn't want alcohol sales in the town. On Monday, the city clerk notified the Huck's CEO over the phone.

In the early afternoon, the CEO, Todd Jenney, emailed Crofton Mayor Dan Lacy. The company was yanking its application, Jenney said.

"We intend to fully cooperate with the wishes of the city of Crofton, where Huck's now calls home," the email read.

Leaders from several Protestant churches had planned to meet that evening and discuss their response to the announcement of beer sales. When Lacy told them about Jenney's new email, their attitudes toward the company softened.

They all agreed to support the store, two pastors said.

"It was welcome news," said Steve Allen, pastor of Crofton Christian Church. "They've made a positive step in the right direction, and we need to show them support."

Bobby Reno, whose church, Crofton Baptist, hosted the Monday evening meeting, said he'll ask his congregation on Sunday morning to patronize the store. The church may even send the company a letter of thanks, Reno said.

Where's the patriots' parade?

When I flew home to Detroit for Thanksgiving this year, I was greeted by clowns at the airport. About 30 joyous, colorful people thanked me for coming to the city and tried to put beads around my neck. (It scared the heck out of me, but that's an entirely different story.) I know the ceremony wasn't for me in particular and I had only been gone a short time. But, it was oddly heart-warming to see strangers so excited that I was home, even if they were wearing rubber noses and massive shoes.

There was also a colorful exhibition at another airport I visited Wednesday, but the colors this time were red, white and blue; they flowed abundantly through a hangar at Fort Campbell as friends and family awaited the arrival of 280 soldiers.

As I rode a large bus, used to ferry family members to the event, I got a sense of what the Welcome Home ceremony's atmosphere would be like. Families were talking a little, but most people had the look of a child who knows his hour-long timeout is almost over. The re-

Kentucky among states getting US education waiver

BY JANET CAPPIELLO
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Kentucky was one of 10 states Thursday to be granted relief from some parts of the Bush-era No Child Left Behind law, allowing the state to use a newly developed accountability system to determine progress in public schools.

Under NCLB, progress in public schools is primarily measured using scores from standardized reading and math tests. Reductions in federal funding were one consequence for being listed as a failing school or district.

Kentucky's model scraps the one-test method and instead measures a school's progress using a combination of test scores, achievement gap levels, student progress, graduation rates and career- and college-readiness benchmarks.

Sources: Pentagon rules shift on women in combat

BY LOLITA C. BALDOR
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is unveiling plans Thursday to allow women to serve in thousands of military jobs closer to the front lines, reflecting the realities of the last decade of war in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Defense officials say the new rules will still mean that woman are barred from serving as infantry, armor and special operations forces — considered the most dangerous combat jobs. But the changes will open the door for more opportunities and promotions for women by allowing them to perform jobs they are already performing, but in battalions, which are closer to the fighting and once considered too dangerous for women.

A 1994 combat exclusion policy bans women from being assigned to ground combat units below the brigade level. A brigade is roughly 3,500 troops split into several battalions of about 800 soldiers each. Historically, brigades were based farther from the front lines and often include top command and support staff, while the battalions are usually in closer contact with the enemy.

In the past decade, the necessities of war propelled women into jobs such as medics, military police and intelligence officers, and they were sometimes attached — but not formally assigned — to battalions. So while a woman couldn't be assigned as an infantryman in a battalion going out on patrol, she could fly the helicopter supporting the unit, or move in to provide medical aid if troops were injured.

The officials said the new rules will formally allow women to work in those jobs at the battalion level.

"We believe that it's very important to explore ways to offer more opportunities to women in the military," Pentagon press secretary George Little said Thursday.

WHO WE ARE: Sherry Bryan, 36, Hopkinsville

Sherry Bryan has always had bad skin. Despite going to a dermatologist, it seemed no one could clear up her acne until she went to an esthetician — a non-medical skin care specialist.

When she was 30, she decided to become an esthetician herself.

"She cleared up my skin...so I wanted to be able to do that," she said. "I always loved makeup and I have always had a little soft spot for acne people."

She opened DermaBliss Skin Care after she tried working in salons but found that her employers didn't always treat her clients the way she wanted to treat them.

"I try not to rush people. I try to spend time with people — listen too them," she said. "The most rewarding thing about it is most of my clients become my friends."

For college bound, a look at financial aid changes

NEW YORK (AP) — The mad dash to cobble together college funding will soon be under way.

In the weeks ahead, colleges will begin mailing out their much-anticipated acceptance letters and financial aid packages. The notices will alleviate pent up anxiety and finally give high school seniors a clearer idea of what their futures will hold.

But amid all the emotions, students and families will also need to start sorting out how they'll pay for tuition. The average bill now comes in at more than $17,000 to attend an in-state public college.

The problem is that navigating the universe of financial aid can be confusing. That's because there's a vast patchwork of grants, scholarships and loans available. But a failure to properly compare the options and explore the alternatives could mean the difference in thousands of dollars in debt upon graduation.

Adding to that confusion is a spate of headlines in recent weeks regarding changes in financial aid. To help navigate this process, here's a look at what's behind the recent changes:

Comparing costs

As part of his broad plans to make higher education more affordable, President Barack Obama recently said he wants to make it easier for families to size up the cost of college.

As it stands, there isn't a uniform template for financial aid award letters and officials say the forms can be difficult to decipher, even misleading. For example, schools usually provide a total "out of pocket" cost after subtracting aid such as grants and scholarships. But some schools also subtract loans from that figure, even though loans have to be repaid and actually push up costs because of interest charges.

In other cases, interest rates and other loan terms are not spelled out. Officials say this could lead to students taking on more debt than they realize.

To address the issue, the Department of Education and the newly created Consumer Financial Protection Bureau announced in October that they are developing a model financial aid form. There aren't any plans yet to make the form mandatory. But once a template is finalized, Congress could vote to require colleges to use it to maintain access to federal aid. The adoption of such a form has also been widely supported by student advocates.

Separately, Obama is pushing for a "college scorecard" that would require schools to disclose their graduation rates, rate of employment and debt repayment among graduates.

Interest rates

Taking out a student loan to attend college has become the norm, with two-thirds of graduates leaving campus in debt. But not all loans are alike. So it might have caught your attention last month when Obama said in his State of the Union address that the fixed interest rates on student loans are set to double in July if Congress fails to act.

Before you panic, keep in mind that there are primarily two types of federal student loans: subsidized and unsubsidized. The difference is that the government doesn't start charging interest on subsidized loans until the student graduates. With unsubsidized loans, interest starts accruing right away.

The loans also come with different interest rates. Unsubsidized loans currently charge a fixed rate of 6.8 percent. The interest rate on subsidized loans was gradually lowered to its current fixed rate of 3.4 percent over the past few years. But the law that temporarily reduced the rate sunsets in July.

So unless Congress extends the reduction, the rate on subsidized loans will snap back to 6.8 percent.

This may affect even families that are relatively well off; not everyone who qualifies for a subsidized loan is from a low-income household. This could be the case for students who are attending expensive schools or have other siblings in college. Eligibility is based on financial need, which is determined by a formula on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid.

Then there are private student loans, which come with entirely different terms. These are widely considered to be an option of last resort since the interest rates tend to be higher and variable, meaning they rise and fall with a benchmark rate. And since benchmark rates are at record lows, the rates of private lenders are likely to rise in the years ahead.

Hardship clauses

Another difference to note between private and federal loans is that the latter come with greater safety nets.

The issue came to light last week when Sallie Mae, a private student lender, said it was changing how it handles a fee it charges unemployed borrowers who seek to suspend payments.

Sallie Mae isn't cancelling the $50 fee, but said it will now apply the money toward the borrower's loan balance if on-time payments are resumed for six months in a row. The change came after an online petition asking the company to drop the fee collected more than 77,000 signatures on Change.org.

By contrast, borrowers who are unemployed or suffering economic hardship aren't charged to defer payments on federal student loans. In addition, they can apply for a program called Income-Based Repayment, which caps monthly payments at 15 percent of annual income above $16,300. Those who earn less don't have to make any payments; any remaining debt after 25 years is forgiven, or 10 years for those entering public service jobs.

Obama is also pushing to have a change take effect this year that would cap monthly payments to 10 percent of income above $16,300. Borrowers would also be relieved of payments sooner, with any remaining debt forgiven after 20 years. That change had originally been scheduled to take effect in 2014.

McConnell, Paul press for answers on Paducah plant

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell and other Kentucky congressional leaders are pressing the Department of Energy to offer a plan for the future of Paducah's government-owned nuclear enrichment plant, which could cease operations and cut its workforce later this year.

McConnell, the Republican leader in the Senate, along with Sen. Rand Paul and Rep. Ed Whitfield, sent a letter to Energy Secretary Steven Chu Thursday demanding a plan for the Paducah Gaseous Diffusion Plant. The lawmakers want the Obama administration to allow the western Kentucky plant to re-enrich its leftover uranium so it can be sold on the market.

The letter says re-enrichment work at the 60-year-old plant would preserve about 1,200 jobs and raise revenue for the government.

But McConnell indicated Thursday that he feels a re-enrichment program is not in the cards for the Paducah plant, which stores 40,000 cylinders of depleted uranium.

"The administration been refusing to answer, although it's pretty clear what the answer is," McConnell said in a call with reporters. "We're going to give them one more time to change their minds and after that I think people at home will have a clear indication without any ambiguity of where we're headed."

KENTUCKY BRIEF

Police say boy, 11, accidentally shot brother

LONDON, Ky. (AP) — An accidental shooting has killed a 9-year-old boy in southern Kentucky.

Kentucky State Police said the victim's 11-year-old brother was handling a gun when it discharged and the younger boy was struck.

The incident occurred at a Wayne County home, four miles west of Monticello.

Trooper Don Trosper said in a news release that the preliminary investigation shows the shooting was an accident. The boys' names were not released.

DONKEY BASKETBALL RIDES AGAIN

Pembroke Ruritan Club's fundraiser set for Saturday

BY DAVID SNOW
FOR THE NEW ERA

Some people just won't get off their — well, you know — for fundraising efforts.

The Pembroke Ruritan Club, however, has found a way around that and in fact will be staying on them.

The club will have a donkey basketball game Saturday at the Pembroke Ruritan Community Center — formerly the Pembroke school — to raise money to maintain the building and its gymnasium.

The game will feature area firefighters against local members of the Fraternal Order of Police, and while a regular basketball game pitting these organizations against each other may be entertaining, having them play while riding donkeys makes it more interesting.

In donkey basketball, players must straddle their donkey while shooting. While passing the ball, either the thrower or the receiver must be on their donkey. Dribbling is not required, but the player with the ball must maintain contact with his ride or the ball goes to the other team.

The game will begin at 6 p.m. Ruritan organizers set the time earlier than usual to allow University of Kentucky fans to watch the Wildcats' game that night.

Doors open for the donkey basketball game at 5 p.m.

"We encourage people to come early, because our seats are not numbered," Ruritan Club President Jack Lackey Sr. said. "So, whoever gets there first is going to get the best seats. In the past, by 5:30, the gym's been pretty full."

Prior to the game, the Ruritans will have pork chop sandwiches, hot dogs, popcorn, soft drinks and other items.

Tickets are $8, and Ruritan members encourage people to get their tickets early, as there are a limited number available.

Tickets may be purchased early at Western Kentucky Crop Insurance Corp. at 218 S. Main St. in downtown Pembroke.

Tickets will be available at the door, but Lackey encouraged people to get tickets while they are available.

"We have this event about once every three years, and we've always had a real big demand for it," Lackey said.

For more information or to buy tickets, call Lackey at 270-475-4174.

"It's a fun time," Lackey said. "There seems to be one hard, fast rule in donkey basketball: Those who can ride can't shoot, and those who can shoot can't ride. So, there's not a lot of points scored, but they do have a lot of fun."

DAVID SNOW is the editor of The Eagle Post. Reach David at 270-887-3295 or dsnow@theeaglepost.us.

KENTUCKY BRIEF

Former Ohio county official charged in Ky.

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A northern Kentucky prosecutor has charged a former county commissioner from Ohio with soliciting prostitution and drug trafficking.

The Kenton County Attorney's office announced the misdemeanor charges against 60-year-old Archie Wilson, who resigned abruptly last week from his position as Clermont County commissioner in Ohio.

A Kenton District Court clerk said Thursday morning that Wilson had not yet been arrested. A message left for Wilson at Midwestern Plumbing Services, which lists him as chief operating officer, was not immediately returned.

The case against Wilson began in Clermont County, according to a Clermont County Sheriff's Office report cited by The Kentucky Enquirer.

Student named finalist in mask design contest

Isabell Park creates a mask for Predator's goalie Pekka Rinne

BY DENNIS O'NEIL
NEW ERA FEATURE WRITER

Hopkinsville High School senior Isabell Park was recently named one of five finalists in the "Design Pekka's Mask" contest for the Nashville Predators hockey team.

More than 200 contestants submitted possible designs for the mask of Predators' goalie Pekka Rinne. Park found out about the contest from a coworker at the Christian County Clerk's Office. She worked on her design for more than a day in mid-January and submitted it the last week of January.

With her design, Park said she tried to incorporate the current Predators logo with one the team used previously. Considering Rinne's Finnish heritage, she also incorporated the national flag of Finland as well as the American flag into the design.

The finalists were posted online at the Predators website and voted on by visitors. Park recently learned that she didn't win, but was excited to have been a finalist.

"I was not expecting to be a finalist," said Park, 17. "It was really good to hear."

Chris Gilkey, a teacher at HHS who had Park in his psychology class as a sophomore, extolled her artistic talent.

"Any kind of project we had in class that involved her artistic ability, it was above and beyond for her," Gilkey said. "She is extremely talented."

A fourth defeat for Romney? Lack of ads could hurt

NEW YORK (AP) — Mitt Romney is in danger of losing his fourth straight state in Saturday's caucuses in Maine, where he and his allies have been all but absent from TV.

That's no coincidence.

Over the past month, he has won in states where he and an allied super PAC, called Restore Our Future, have pounded his rivals with millions of dollars in negative ads. But he has tended to lose big when he has stopped using his power to crush other contenders by spending a ton of money — particularly on TV.

After defeats Tuesday in Colorado, Minnesota and Missouri, Romney's campaign is bracing for the possibility of more bad news in Maine, where Republicans will announce the results of a weeklong series of caucuses Saturday and where Romney's TV presence has been virtually non-existent. Ron Paul has made a strong play for Maine, making it essentially a two-man contest since Newt Gingrich and Rick Santorum aren't actively competing there.

A victory for Paul would make him the fourth candidate to take a Republican contest so far. And the prospect of four consecutive weak performances for Romney raises questions about his durability as the GOP leader absent a barrage of attack ads lobbed at his foes.

"Romney has been the presumed front-runner, which means he's walking around with a big target on his back. So unless he or a super PAC is on the air critiquing the other candidates, voters aren't going to hear a lot of negative messages about them," said Seth Maskett, an associate professor of political science at the University of Denver.

The campaign and Restore Our Future spent just under $190,000 on ads altogether to influence Tuesday's caucuses in Colorado and Minnesota. The two groups bought no ads in Missouri, which held a non-binding primary the same day.

In states where Romney has won:

■ He spent $1.2 million in New Hampshire, next door to Massachusetts where he served as governor, compared with $1.7 million for Paul, who placed second. Restore Our Future did not purchase TV ads in New Hampshire.

■ In Florida, Romney and his super PAC spent a combined $15.9 million. Gingrich and an allied super PAC, Winning Our Future, spent just over $4 million.

■ In Nevada, Romney and his super PAC spent $566,000 on ads. Paul spent $350,000. Gingrich did not purchase any ads in the state, and Santorum placed a minimal cable buy.

■ Romney and his allies also spent heavily in South Carolina — $3.3 million total, compared to about $2 million for Gingrich and his allies. The former Massachusetts governor lost the state to Gingrich, an indication that money won't always lead to a victory.

■ In Iowa, Restore Our Future unleashed $2.7 million in negative advertising against Gingrich as polling showed the former House speaker climbing into a lead there weeks before the kickoff caucuses Jan. 3. Gingrich's rise was quickly halted, enabling Santorum to eke out a narrow win over Romney.

Restore Our Future, which is staffed by former Romney aides and has raised nearly $31 million so far, has for months acted as his shadow campaign even though it cannot directly coordinate with Romney's official operation. It's one of many super PACs unleashed by a 2010 Supreme Court ruling easing campaign spending restrictions and has been the most active and influential in the presidential contest so far.

WAIVER: Kentucky approved to use alternative to federal education law

“The accountability model that we will use for state and federal purposes provides in-depth information about every school and district, so that we can focus our resources on the areas of greatest need and challenge our students and educators to constantly improve toward the ultimate goal of college and career readiness,” Kentucky Education Commissioner Terry Holliday said in a statement. Gov. Steve Beshear also applauded the decision, which the state has been waiting for since applying for relief in November. “Kentucky is once again leading the nation in the area of public school accountability,” said Gov. Steve Beshear. “This federal flexibility opens a new chapter in the Commonwealth’s work to ensure a well-educated citizenry.” Kentucky education officials have been overhauling the state’s public education system from top to bottom since the 2009 passage of Senate Bill 1, which mandated that every Kentucky public school student graduate prepared for higher education or a career. The state’s application was more than 400 pages long and provided a detailed roadmap of the last two years’ worth of efforts to overhaul public education in the state.

In detailing the new method for measuring progress, the application said the state is setting lofty goals for children beginning as early as the third grade. “The new testing system is linked from Grade 3 to Grade 12 and locked into college readiness standards,” it reads. “Students taking the tests from Grade 3 to Grade 12 will know if they are on the path toward college and career readiness as defined by all of the public universities of Kentucky.” Kentucky’s accountability model will measure achievement by tests in reading, mathematics, science, social studies and writing, according to the Department of Education. There will be so-called “Program Reviews” in subjects that aren’t tested, such as arts and humanities and practical living-career studies. The steps to close the achievement gap — the degree to which some categories of students tend to score below achievement goals — include placing students in one “Student Gap Group” in an attempt to give schools one goal to reach. Under NCLB, gap groups are sectioned out and schools given benchmarks for each subgroup, such as students with disabilities, black students and students who receive free or subsidized meals.

BUCKET: Army families question need for parade

There were signs, banners, flags and even the Screaming Eagle band to welcome them home. No parade, though. The issue of parades for returning veterans thrust itself into the limelight recently, thanks to, of all things, the Super Bowl. After the New York Giants defeated the New England Patriots on Sunday, they embarked on the parade traditionally held for the winning team. Critics asked why a group of men who play a game for a living should get a massive celebration, when men and women returning from a mission that allows those games to take place are not afforded the same luxury. President Barack Obama recently announced the end of the war in Iraq, and Pentagon officials have commented about ending combat efforts in Afghanistan in the next few years. As a result, people want to know if a parade is in the works for these real patriots. Assistant Secretary of Defense Douglas B. Wilson said the Pentagon is well aware of the need for a celebration. Appearing on an NPR show this week, he said higher ups in the military want to wait until everyone deployed in Afghanistan is back before having a massive “Welcome Home” celebration. He encouraged local communities to organize their own ceremonies, as was the case in St. Louis recently. Natasha Garcia, of Oak Grove, thinks a local parade is a great idea. As she waited with family for the return of her husband, Sgt. Kelvin Garcia, she said most of the surrounding area has some connection to the military anyway. “They’re looking forward to seeing us,” Natasha said. “It would show them how important they are.” She thought a parade would be especially nice for soldiers whose loved ones are unable to see them step off the plane. For her own family though, she was embracing the opportunity for Kelvin to get to know his 11-month-old son, Jayden. Larry and Melissa Myers, of Indiana, didn’t think a Super Bowl parade was a fair comparison. They made the trip down to see their 21-year-old grandson Cory come home, and thought the Fort Campbell ceremony was enough for everyone involved. Cheryl Derwent, of Columbus, Ohio, doesn’t like the idea of a parade either, but for a different reason: She thinks the celebration could bring a terrorist attack. The mother of Spc. Adam Derwent, she came into town Monday to make sure she was on post to greet him. Adam’s brother, Dave, accompanied her; and he didn’t think soldiers would want the parade anyway. Austin Allison, 11, and his little sister, Emma, 6, didn’t seem to entirely understand the question when I posed it to them. “We don’t like the Giants,” Emma said, as Austin also loudly protested the idea of a parade for the football team. Despite the 38-degree weather, Austin was outside without a coat. The way he rapidly waved his flag and the buzz that seemed to grip his shoulders convinced me he couldn’t feel the chill. It was the family’s fourth ceremony anyway, his mom, Aimee, told me; the last few had been before the crack of dawn. Aimee thought Austin was going to tackle his father, 39-year-old Chief Warrant Officer 3 William Allison, as soon as he got off the plane, if Emma didn’t beat him to it, of course. Aimee quickly shrugged off the idea of a parade. “We just want him home,” she said. Austin immediately chimed in: “It’s about time he came home.” The plane touched down shortly thereafter. Men and women in uniform laid down their weapons before marching into the hangar. After cheers and cries, Maj. Gen. James McConville, commander of the 101st Airborne Division, congratulated the soldiers on a successful tour and told them to seek help reintegrating if they needed it. I’m sure a few people heard him speak. I doubt they registered what he said though. The moment the soldiers were released to see family, children sprinted into father’s arms. Girlfriends, wives and husbands rammed into one another. Tears crawled down cheeks and children crawled up camouflaged legs. Parades are wonderful. Soldiers should be recognized for the extraordinary sacrifices they make. But I’m almost positive the concept didn’t cross the mind of Kelvin Garcia when he picked up Jayden. Or Adam Derwent, when he hugged his mom. Or William Allison, when he saw the look in Aimee’s eyes that’s reserved for your one and only. There was no ticker tape floating through mine, that’s for sure.

HUCK’S: Company halts plan to sell beer

Neither church took an official stance on the issue of alcohol sales — they left it up to each member. Lacy said many people in Crofton don’t want alcohol sales banned everywhere; they just want to keep them out of their small town. “We’ve made it all these years without the sale of alcohol in Crofton,” Lacy said. The store’s previous owners, Greg and Tamara Martin, sold it to the Huck’s corporation because they wanted to go into food service full time. The transfer became official Jan. 19. The new management ranked many longtime customers when someone from Huck’s asked a 73-year-old man, Junior Clark, to take his chair outside. Clark had eaten breakfast at the store every morning since it opened in the mid-1990s. He kept a black swivel chair parked at a corner table because it was easier on his joints than a bench. After Clark took his chair to a diner across the street, the diner’s business nearly doubled, one of the owners told the New Era. On Feb. 1, Huck’s ran a classified ad in the New Era, announcing its intention to apply for a retail beer license by Feb. 14. “Any person, association, corporation or body politic may protest the granting of the license(s) by writing the Office of Alcoholic Beverage Control,” the ad read. When Crofton City Council met Feb. 2, every council member officially stated they opposed the sale of alcohol in the town, Lacy said. The company acted quickly when it heard about the resistance, Jenney said. No one wanted to upset more potential customers. Though nearly all Huck’s stores sell beer, the company also surrendered its liquor license at a store in Austin, Ind., after hearing complaints from the community, Jenney said. Kris Page, pastor of Cornerstone Bible Church, said keeping the area dry makes it a little safer. Alcohol is still available in Madisonville and Hopkinsville, but keeping sales out of Crofton reduces risks of drinking and driving, he said. He believes these events surrounding Huck’s made local residents more vigilant. “I think it’s really raised some awareness in the community of what could happen,” Page said. “It could kind of waken a sleeping giant, so to speak.”

COMBAT: Military policy shift opens more positions to women

“This review has been thorough and extensive,” with input from all branches of the military. Little said that even after the new policy takes effect, the Pentagon will continue to search for ways to open up additional positions to women in the military. The latest changes, which open up as many as 14,000 additional jobs for women, would have the greatest effect on the Army and Marine Corps. Those two services ban women from more jobs than the Navy and Air Force do, largely because of the infantry positions. Defense officials spoke about the report on condition of anonymity because it had not yet been publicly released. The report will be sent to Congress Thursday, and if lawmakers take no action after 30 work days, the policy will take effect. Though numbers vary by service branch, women make up more than 14 percent of the nation’s armed forces — that’s roughly 200,000 women in the active duty force of 1.43 million. There long has been opposition to putting them in combat, based on questions of whether women have the necessary strength and stamina, or whether their presence might hurt unit cohesion. There also have been suggestions that the American public would not tolerate large numbers of women coming home from war in body bags. But the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, where battlefield lines are scattered and blurred, and insurgents can be around every corner, have made it almost impossible to keep women clear of combat. Some 280,000 women have been sent to Iraq, Afghanistan or to jobs in neighboring nations in support of the wars, roughly 12 percent of all those who have served there. Of the more than 6,300 who have been killed, 144 were women.

Broad coalition presses for casino gambling in Ky.

BY ROGER ALFORD
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A coalition of business, labor and education groups pressed state lawmakers Thursday to approve a constitutional amendment that, if ratified by voters, would legalize casinos in Kentucky.

“We have a very simple goal — let the people decide how to handle this issue of casino gaming,” said David Adkisson, president of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce. “Year after year, our members overwhelmingly support expanded gaming and the citizens’ right to vote. We believe it is time to finally put the issue on the ballot.”

Despite a long history of wagering on horse races, Kentucky’s constitution frowns on casino-style gambling. And, in the Bible-belt state, many lawmakers have been reluctant to support the proposal, knowing they may face unapproving constituents in upcoming legislative elections.

Gov. Steve Beshear has been pushing for expanded gambling opportunities in Kentucky for the past five years, but has so far been unable to get lawmakers to go along with him. The second-term Democrat said Kentuckians now are wagering hundreds of millions of dollars in casinos in neighboring states. He said if Kentucky legalized casinos, that money could be kept in the state.

Republican activist Larry Forgy, a staunch casino opponent, lambasted the Chamber of Commerce for taking sides on gambling, which he considers a moral issue.

Latest lawsuit calls for new congressional lines

BY ROGER ALFORD
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A Lexington attorney filed a lawsuit Thursday asking a judge to draw new boundaries around Kentucky’s six congressional districts, claiming they have grown out of balance over the last decade.

After weeks of negotiations, the state House and Senate were unable to agree on redrawn congressional districts, which forced congressional candidates to file to run in districts as they existed for the past decade.

“The congressional districts are no longer constitutional under the ‘one person, one vote’ rule,” attorney Scott White said. “We requested the court itself to redraw the congressional lines.”

A court battle already is raging over legislative redistricting in Kentucky.

The Legislative Research Commission announced Thursday it will appeal a judge’s ruling that found newly drawn legislative districts to be unconstitutional.

Commission spokesman Rob Weber said the appeal would be made directly to the Kentucky Supreme Court “in order to get a quicker resolution” to a case that’s been pending since last month.

The General Assembly has been in a bitter partisan fight over redistricting that has put all major issues in limbo since lawmakers convened in early January.

Franklin Circuit Judge Phillip Shepherd ordered the secretary of state on Tuesday not to recognize newly redrawn legislative districts. That move forced several lawmakers who are up for reelection this year to file candidacy papers in districts that had been in place for the past decade.

In his statement Thursday, Weber said the Legislative Research Commission, which provides administrative support to the Legislature, will ask justices to reinstate the new districts.

“The congressional districts are no longer constitutional under the ‘one person, one vote’ rule.”

Bill aims to increase US 68 speed limit

BY DAVE BOUCHER
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

A pair of local representatives on Wednesday introduced a bill in another attempt to bump up the speed limit on U.S. 68 to 60 mph.

Reps. John Tilley, D-Hopkinsville, and Myron Dossett, R-Pembroke, sponsored House Bill 376. Although Dossett and Rep. Jim DeCesare, R-Rockfield, introduced a similar bill at the end of January, Dossett said the new bill covers more ground.

“(The) drafter didn’t understand what we were saying,” Dossett explained, referencing House Bill 333.

In HB 333, the speed limit would increase on U.S. 68 from west of Bowling Green to the Christian County border. However, Dossett said legislators would like to see the speed limit pushed up on a larger section of the road. The new bill would increase the speed limit from Bowling Green to the border of Trigg and Marshall counties.

The new bill does not supersede the previous one, Dossett said. In fact, he’s excited about two different pieces of legislation that he believes would increase economic opportunities for the area.

“Two bites at the apple is sometimes better than one,” he said.

Members of the House transportation committee and the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet are aware of the measures, Dossett said, and are discussing some of the factors that would go into increasing the limit.

Enacting this or any other legislation seems tenuous until the legislature is able to solve the current redistricting problem, Dossett said. “Once again, we’re mired back into this stuff.”

Dossett was ready to vent his frustration about an appeal to a Franklin Circuit Court judge’s ruling that new legislative district lines were unconstitutional. While Dossett agrees with the ruling, he thinks the whole matter should have been solved in a special session before the start of the 2012 General Assembly.

“Anything that deals with the budget will not be acted on until this gets out of the way,” he added. “That scares me.”

Kentucky highway fatalities increasing in 2012

The rate of fatalities on Kentucky roadways has increased in 2012, according to preliminary numbers from the Kentucky State Police. There were 64 fatalities as of Feb. 9, five more than at the same time in 2011.

“Although it is still early, we want to be proactive in addressing this increase in highway deaths,” said KSP spokesman Lt. David Jude.

Of the 64 people killed so far this year, 31 were not wearing seat belts and nine died in crashes that involved alcohol.

Statistics from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration indicate that seat belts, when worn correctly, reduce the risk of fatalities by 45 percent for front-seat vehicle occupants.

“KSP wants to remind motorists not to become complacent when it comes to highway safety,” Jude said. “We plan to be vigilant in enforcing seat belt laws and will continue targeting impaired drivers who endanger the lives of others.”

January accidents up from last year’s total

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

The number of accidents in Hopkinsville during January was higher than the number from most months last year, according to a Hopkinsville police report.

In January, 108 accidents were recorded by police compared to 85 the year prior.

The only month in 2011 that had more than 108 accidents was September with 109.

However, the number of wrecks with injuries in January was 11 — one fewer than there were last year.

There were no fatal car wrecks in January, according to the report.

In January 2011, there were three fatal car wrecks.

Measuring good deeds in times of bad news

The story of a woman who recently left the comfort and safety of her Hopkinsville home to pursue a higher calling of service to orphans in Haiti is a refreshing reminder that good deeds and good people still flourish in our world. Pam Foster, as we learned Saturday in New Era staff writer Nick Tabor's profile, expects to spend the rest of her life on the Caribbean island where 230,000 people were killed in an earthquake two years ago.

OUR OPINION

Foster's plan to cook, teach and care for children in a harsh environment is impressive and inspirational. We are grateful for her example, even if it seems out of reach for most of us.

It's true that few people have the guts, means and drive to pack up and head for the uncertainty of a life in Haiti, but that doesn't mean there aren't ways to devote parts of a life to good work. There are plenty of examples here close to home of people serving, helping and leading.

On Monday, about 50 Fort Campbell soldiers — members of Delta Company, 5th Battalion of the 101st Aviation Regiment — came to Hopkinsville to help clean up the bank of Little River at Jeffers Bend. After they tore into tangles of brush, the riverbank was cleared to help with events coming later this year, such as Take Kids Fishing Day.

A few weeks ago, Holiday Elementary School curriculum specialist Haley Moore organized the Christian County school system's first math bee for third-graders. It had 36 contestants from the county's elementary schools.

Early last month, Challenge House program founder Wally Bryan helped open the Coffee Connection on South Main between Ninth and 10th streets. It has free coffee, snacks and Wi-Fi for anyone who needs a place to meet, sit or just rest for a brief time. The coffee house shares space with offices for Challenge House and the YMCA's Jobs for Life program.

These are just a few of the examples of good people and good deeds in our community. Remember them the next time you are overwhelmed with news of bad deeds.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Paying the bills to educate all children in a poor state

The Editor, New Era,
I read with interest Ronald G. Stephenson's (Feb. 3 letter) regarding responsible parenting and early childhood education. It is so good to be reminded of the importance of strong homes, loving parents and structure in the lives of young children. Parents who understand child development and provide enrichment at home add icing to the cake when preparing children for formal education.

We also know that a high quality early childhood education makes an enormous difference in later outcomes for young people. Exposing children to art, drama and music is not a luxury as some people think, but rather, based on the research, has an impact on brain development, enhancing learning in other disciplines!

Here is the challenge, however. Kentucky is a poor state! The best way we can assist our teachers is to provide them with the supports they must have to teach the children who come from culturally and socio-economically deprived homes! This is not cheap to do! It will take far more money to provide for at-risk children than we are allocating now. In fact, funding has not kept up with that which was required by the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA) of 1990. Many of the components of KERA such as extended school programs and family resource centers which have helped us move from 49 to 33 in the national rankings are being eroded from lack of sufficient funding!

Senate Bill 1 with its mandate for more rigorous core curriculum standards and accountability is a significant second layer of reform. Without additional funding we will not be able to implement its requirements effectively. Kentucky, which has been an innovative leader nationally for the last 25 years, may soon find itself back to its pre-1990's position of saying, "Thank God for Mississippi!"

Our teachers, particularly over the past three years in Christian County, have made tremendous strides in meeting the academic needs of ALL children as indicated by the data. Research has shown that at-risk children can learn when teachers are provided with the resources they need to teach them. Since there are no "throw away" children, whether they are the troubled affluent or the down and out, this is extremely important information to have! When we provide our schools with these very expensive supports, and when principals and teachers are held accountable, the data show that learning at high levels takes place.

Thank God for good teachers who are not afraid of change and welcome accountability! Thank God for the lives they touch and for the productive citizens they produce! Thank God for administrators and school boards who are not afraid to lead. Thank God for parents and business leaders who prod us to live in the present and plan for the future. Thank God for our community's commitment to improve our schools for the sake of the children, despite the pain that always accompanies radical change!

Never forget! Kentucky is a poor state! Education is the preeminent issue in the commonwealth if we are interested in a better life for all of us. We cannot educate all children well without paying the bill. Never forget, "It's all about kids!" They are the future of our town, our state and our nation!

International intervention stirs hatred of United States

The Editor, New Era,
I believe the United Nations Security Council is powerless to act against Syria per Chapter 1, Article 2, Paragraph 7 of the United Nations Charter, which reads: "Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; ..."

Let us remember what got the USA hated in so much of the world is that we have told a lot of countries around the world that you aren't able to choose your own type of government or leaders that you should have. Hence, we will choose the type of government and leaders that we think you should have and at time imposed them on you by military force. This always makes friends!

Next, in the Middle East, we let Israel do anything it wants and overlook any of its transgressions. We allowed them to cross international borders and not respect the sovereignty of the countries they invade. We want to punish any other country in the Middle East that has half or less of these transgressions. We don't even require Israel to disclose the stock piles of nuclear weapons that is has and/or may use on one of its misadventures across international borders.

Israel claims it is interested in a two-state solution in Palestine. However, it starts with a non-starter, a demilitarized Palestinian state. Every sovereign state must have the ability to defend itself with the military force. Israel wants a Palestinian state that cannot stop Israel if it wants to invade that state.

All responsible comments are welcome as usual.

OP-ED

Insurance rule from Obama 'abhorrent'

The Obama administration's recent decision to force religious institutions to violate their own beliefs is shocking — because it tramples our First Amendment religious freedoms, and because it demonstrates the dangers of an all-powerful big government.

The president recently approved a ruling of his Health and Human Services Department saying that under the health spending bill, religious institutions — charities, hospitals, and schools — will be forced under penalty of law to go against their own teachings. If they refuse, they face fines for millions of dollars. Or they can shut their doors.

The decision to force religious charities, hospitals, and schools to comply with a mandate that violates their sacred beliefs is abhorrent to the founding principles of our nation.

You don't have to belong to any particular faith in order to see that if government can violate the religious rights of one group, then surely it can violate those of others. Or that if the rights of some are not protected, the rights of all are in danger.

And you don't have to be a lawyer to see that this assault by the Obama administration on religious faith is at odds with the free exercise clause of our Constitution.

Here are some examples of the vital services that religious institutions in our country provide:

One out of six patients in America is treated at a Catholic hospital.

Catholic Charities is the largest private provider of social services to poor children, families, and individuals in America.

And the Catholic Church runs the largest network of private schools in the country.

These institutions and others have thrived because they've been allowed to freely pursue their religious convictions in a country that, until now, respected their constitutional right to do so.

I say this government has crossed a dangerous line. And if they don't act to right this mistake, Congress will.

I will work to lead members of the U.S. Senate who recognize the fundamental importance of religious freedom — from both parties — to ensure that our rights as Americans are respected by this government, and protected in full.

Religious freedom inspired the birth of our country. Our Founders knew that, and made sure the rights they fought and died for were made inviolate in our First Amendment. Today, the rights of the American people of all faiths still need defending.

MITCH MCCONNELL, R-Ky., is the Senate minority leader.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Feb. 10, the 41st day of 2012. There are 325 days left in the year.

On this date:
In 1763, Britain, Spain and France signed the Treaty of Paris, ending the Seven Years' War.
In 1840, Britain's Queen Victoria married Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

In 1841, Upper Canada and Lower Canada were proclaimed united under an Act of Union passed by the British Parliament.

In 1912, Joseph Lister, the "Father of Antiseptic Surgery," died in Walmer, Kent, England, at age 84.

In 1942, the former French liner Normandie capsized in New York Harbor a day after it caught fire while being refitted for the U.S. Navy. RCA Victor presented Glenn Miller and his Orchestra with a "gold record" for their recording of "Chattanooga Choo Choo," which had sold more than 1 million copies.

In 1949, Arthur Miller's play "Death of a Salesman" opened at Broadway's Morosco Theater with Lee J. Cobb as Willy Loman.

In 1967, the 25th Amendment to the Constitution, dealing with presidential disability and succession, was ratified as Minnesota and Nevada adopted it.

In 1968, U.S. figure skater Peggy Fleming won America's only gold medal of the Winter Olympic Games in Grenoble, France.

In 1981, eight people were killed when a fire set by a busboy broke out at the Las Vegas Hilton hotel-casino.

In 1992, boxer Mike Tyson was convicted in Indianapolis of raping Desiree Washington, a Miss Black America contestant. (Tyson served three years in prison.) Author Alex Haley died in Seattle at age 70.

In 2005, playwright Arthur Miller died in Roxbury, Conn., at age 89 on the 56th anniversary of the Broadway opening of his "Death of a Salesman."

Ten years ago: Snowboarder Kelly Clark won America's first gold at the Salt Lake City Olympics in women's halfpipe. Claudia Pechstein (PEH-shtyn) of Germany shattered her own world record in the 3,000-meter speedskating event, crossing the line in 3:57.70. The Western Conference defeated the Eastern Conference, 135-120, in the NBA

All-Star Game. Former U.N. ambassador Vernon A. Walters died in West Palm Beach, Fla., at age 85.

Five years ago: Less than a month after launching his presidential bid online, Democrat Barack Obama announced his candidacy in person, telling thousands outside the Illinois state capital in Springfield: "Let us transform this nation." Gen. David Petraeus took charge of U.S. forces in Iraq. The AFC defeated the NFC 31-28 in the Pro Bowl.

One year ago: Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak refused to step down or leave the country and instead handed his powers to his vice president, stunning protesters in central Cairo who waved their shoes in contempt and shouted, "Leave, leave, leave." (Mubarak resigned the next day.)

Feds require consumer-friendly health insurance plan summaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Don't have the slightest clue what your health insurance covers?

The Obama administration says that's going to change. Officials announced Thursday that starting later this year private health plans will have to provide consumers with a user-friendly summary of what's covered, along with key cost details such as copays and deductibles.

Just six pages long. No fine print. And because the summaries will use a single standard format, it will allow "apples to apples" comparisons among health plans that aren't possible now. That will help working spouses trying to pick between employer plans, as well as people who buy coverage directly from an insurance company.

"If an insurance plan offers substandard coverage in some area, they won't be able to hide it in dozens of pages of text," said Medicare chief Marilyn Tavenner, who also oversees implementation of President Barack Obama's health care law.

Insurers and business groups were unhappy, calling it another costly new regulation under the overhaul. Consumer groups said the new summaries won't be perfect, but called them a strong start. Employees should start seeing them during open enrollment season this fall.

One shortcoming is that the summaries won't include premiums. Administration officials said they ran into logistical problems trying to do that, and that premiums should be easily available anyway, either from their employer or directly from a health plan. Part of the problem with listing premiums is that insurers can currently charge more for the exact coverage to people in poor health.

Although the health system overhaul itself continues to divide the public, a major poll last year found that 84 percent of Americans support insurance summaries.

The requirement takes effect Sept. 23 and applies to all private insurance, including employer coverage and plans purchased individually, affecting about 150 million to 180 million Americans.

Many big employers currently provide such information to workers during open enrollment. But the federal summary goes further: It requires something new — so-called coverage examples that give a ballpark estimate of the cost of treatment for a typical individual for two common health conditions: normal childbirth and managing diabetes.

A preliminary version of the regulations also called for an example focusing on breast cancer. But Health and Human Services officials said that proved too complicated, since there are different approaches to treatment.

"We didn't take this off because (treatment) happens to be more expensive," said Steve Larsen, head of the Center for Consumer Information and Insurance Oversight. "It just needed more work."

In the future, up to six such coverage examples may be required, he said.

Fla. mogul, facing trial, adopts his girlfriend

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The story already had people's attention: A multimillionaire polo magnate was accused of causing a drunken-driving wreck that killed a young man. But now, with his criminal trial approaching, a strange twist has raised even more eyebrows: He has adopted his 42-year-old girlfriend.

Critics say it is an attempt by John Goodman to shield some of his fortune from the accident victim's family. But at least one legal expert says a judge is likely to see through the maneuver and prevent the 48-year-old owner of the International Polo Club in Palm Beach from benefiting from it.

The adoption was revealed in recently filed court papers, dumbfounding even the judge who will preside over the wrongful-death lawsuit brought by the victim's family. Circuit Judge Glenn Kelley said Goodman's actions "border on the surreal and take the court into a legal twilight zone."

"It's the kind of thing that you go, 'Whoa. What?'" said Bob Jarvis, a law professor at Florida's Nova Southeastern University.

A lawyer for the mother of the man killed in the wreck said in a court filing that Goodman's move was meant to disguise his true wealth should he be found liable and forced to pay punitive damages.

"If, through a series of transactions, John B. Goodman succeeds in preventing the jury from considering evidence of his true wealth, the jury's punitive damage verdict may be far short of anything close to meaningful punishment," said Christian Searcy, who represents Lili Wilson.

Goodman was the heir to his family's business.

NRC approves first new nuclear plant in 30 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's first new nuclear power plant in a generation won approval Thursday as federal regulators voted to grant a license for two new reactors at a site in eastern Georgia.

Atlanta-based Southern Co. hopes to begin operating the $14 billion reactors at its Vogtle site south of Augusta as soon as 2016. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission approved the company's plans on a 4-1 vote.

The NRC last approved construction of a nuclear plant in 1978.

Pregnant women with cancer may get chemo

LONDON (AP) — Researchers have encouraging news for women who find themselves in a very frightening situation: having cancer while pregnant. Studies suggest that these women can be treated almost the same as other cancer patients are, with minimal risk to the fetus.

Only about 1 in 1,000 pregnant women face this dilemma, but doctors fear that more will because the risk of cancer rises with age, and more women are delaying having children until they're older.

Doctors have long worried about how to balance treating a pregnant woman with cancer and the need to protect her fetus from the effects of toxic cancer drugs and radiation treatments, and whether it is safe to continue a pregnancy in certain situations.

Giffords aide to run for seat in special election

PHOENIX (AP) — A top aide to former U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords who was shot in the leg and face in the Tucson rampage that also left the congresswoman severely wounded announced Thursday that he will seek to replace her in a special election.

Democrat Ron Barber declared he would run to serve the last six months of Giffords' term, and his announcement comes after she stepped down last month to focus on her recovery. He told The Associated Press that Giffords and her husband, retired astronaut Mark Kelly, asked him to run.

Kodak to stop making cameras, digital frames

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Eastman Kodak Co. said Thursday that it will stop making digital cameras, pocket video cameras and digital picture frames, marking the end of an era for the company that brought photography to the masses more than a century ago.

Founded by George Eastman in 1880, Kodak filed for bankruptcy protection last month, said it will phase out the product lines in the first half of this year and instead look for other companies to license its brand for those products.

“We’re hoping to allow children the opportunity to participate in group settings who may not have had that opportunity elsewhere, but our intent for this is more of a parent education and empowerment program,” she said. “We want to be able to reach families and answer questions they may have about the children’s developmental stages.”

GAMBLING: Broad coalition presses for casinos in Ky.

“I contend that there’s a front seat in hell for the leadership of an organization that will propose a program that will impose gambling losses on a population that can’t afford to buy a ham sandwich for lunch,” Forgy said. “This is unconscionable.” Forgy, a former state budget director and two-time gubernatorial candidate, insists that opening Kentucky to casino gambling won’t solve the state’s financial problems. “I intend to walk barefooted from one end of this state to the other to defeat this constitutional amendment if they put it on there,” he said. “But I don’t think they have the votes as it stands right now.” Despite heated debate, Beshear’s gambling legislation hasn’t even been filed yet. He is calling for about a half dozen casinos, most of them at horse tracks. Kentucky State Building & Construction Trades Council director Larry Roberts said the proposed constitutional amendment has widespread support. “Look around you,” he said. “Those of us here today represent every corner of our state, all political parties, we are moderates and conservatives, business and labor unions, teachers and private citizens — and, though we may disagree on many other issues, and are not shy about expressing those disagreements, on this issue we agree 100 percent.” That coalition includes several longtime gambling proponents, but it also has a newcomer in the Kentucky Education Action Team, which represents respected education advocates such as the Kentucky Parent Teacher Association, Kentucky School Boards of Association and the Kentucky Association of School Councils. Kentucky Education Action Team member Stu Silberman said schools need additional revenue, and, for that reason, members of the group voted to support the proposed gambling amendment. “Invested wisely, we can build new schools, modernize existing schools and ensure that our children have the resources they need to learn and ultimately compete in a modern economy,” Silberman said. The Family Foundation, an anti-gambling advocacy group, questioned whether members of local PTAs and school councils in small towns across the state would agree with SiAny settlement would have to be approved by a state judge. Silberman that gambling is an acceptable method of generating revenue. “We would like to know whether the education groups that are now in support of gambling legislation are really representing their constituencies,” said Family Foundation spokesman Martin Cothran. “Did they take a survey of their members? If they did, we’ve never heard about it. It would take a good dose of the New Math to conclude that this is really going to help the state.” He added: “Apparently these education groups are under the impression that the three Rs are Reading, Riting, and Roulette.”

REDISTRICTING: Lawsuit claims old districts out of balance

Unhappy with the outcome of the redistricting battle, House Republicans filed suit in January challenging the constitutionality of the new boundaries. A Senate Democrat displaced in the redistricting process joined the lawsuit, which contends that the new districts could have been better balanced by population and redrawn in such a way that fewer counties would have been split among districts. Redistricting occurs every 10 years to account for population changes reported in the U.S. Census. The latest count found that the state’s overall population grew from 4 million to 4.3 million from 2000 to 2010, forcing new legislative and congressional district boundaries to be drawn. At each level of government — state House, Senate and Congress — the districts must be of nearly equal size. The new legislative districts produced some oddly shaped boundaries. The 89th House District stretches from the Tennessee border in McCreary County, zigzags narrowly through Laurel County, then encompasses all of Jackson County for a geographic setup that one lawmaker said would require an airplane for travel. One Senate district stretches from Barbourville to Morehead. Shepherd’s ruling restored old district boundaries and extends the deadline to today for legislative candidates to file to run in this year’s elections.

FORTHE NEW ERA

Country Music Television stars Amber Hayes and The Steve Goodwin Band will be the featured performers at the “Jammin’ for Disaster” concert sponsored by the American Red Cross at 7 p.m. Feb. 25 at Valor Hall Conference and Event Center in Oak Grove. “Jammin’ for Disaster” is the kickoff event for the American Red Cross Heroes program, a fundraising campaign to raise money for the Red Cross disaster services. Tickets can be purchased by calling the American Red Cross Mid-West Kentucky Chapter office in Madisonville at 270-821-6785 Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. General admission tickets are $20 and VIP tickets $25. Patrons purchasing the limited number of VIP tickets will enjoy a private meet-and-greet with the performers. All proceeds from the concert will benefit the regional American Red Cross disaster services fund. Amy Plock, the funds development coordinator for the American Red Cross Mid-West Kentucky Chapter, said disasters don’t have to be something that affect entire cities or regions; they can also be household occurrences. “It doesn’t really matter the size of the disaster,” she said.

“We go out, we assess it, they come in and they are able to leave with funds to get food, clothing. We put them in hotels or pay the next month’s rent.” Plock added that the disaster services fund will also help pay for military funerals. Although the American Red Cross is federally mandated to be in every county, it doesn’t receive federal funding. All of its assistance comes through community donations and fundraisers. Plock said that each of the six counties covered by the ARC Mid-West Kentucky Chapter will host fundraisers for the disaster services fund this year. The chapter covers Christian, Trigg, Hopkins, Caldwell, Muhlenberg and

Todd counties. “Last year, in Madisonville, we had a nursing home that caught on fire,” Plock said. “So, we set up shelter, provided sheets, food and clothing, and it was a handicapped shelter, so it was a little more challenging, but within two hours, we had a shelter up and running and had them out and saved.” The Steve Goodwin Band will open the Feb. 25 concert, followed by Amber Hayes. Both have been featured on CMT. The Steve Goodwin Band recently released the album “Out Here on the Edge,” featuring songs like “Gunnin’ for Your Lovin’” and “United We Stand.” The band features

Goodlettsville, Tenn., natives Chris Tarr on guitar and pedal steel, Chris Ewell on drums, Chase Cox on bass, Steve Colman on guitar and lead singer Steve Goodwin. A native of Weleetka, Okla., Amber Hayes recently released the album “C’mon,” featuring songs like “Right as Rain” and “Wait.” She will release her album “Cowgirls ‘n Angels” later this year. Canaan scores 31, but No. 8 Murray suffers 1st defeat

MURRAY, Ky. (AP) — Tennessee State did what no other team had been able to do this season: beat No. 9 Murray State. Robert Covington had 17 points and eight rebounds to lead the Tigers to a 72-68 victory that handed the last unbeaten team in Division I its first loss of the season. Steve Prohm took the responsibility for his first loss as a head coach upon himself. “I’ve got to do a better job in some areas to make sure we’re doing a better job executing at times,” Prohm said. “But, I’m proud. I’m extremely proud of our guys. We had an amazing run, 23 wins in a row. I’m sure we set a lot of records along the way, but now we’ve got to be totally locked in on winning a conference championship.” Isaiah Canaan had 31 points and six rebounds for Murray State (23-1, 11-1 Ohio Valley Conference).

touches so he just did not control the game as much.” Covington hit a 3-pointer with 4 minutes left that gave Tennessee State a 65-62 lead. The Tigers led 69-68 when a turnover gave Murray State the ball with 11.2 seconds to play. Tennessee State stole the inbounds pass. Covington was fouled with 9.7 seconds left but he missed both free throws. Canaan turned the ball over and committed a foul with 3.5 seconds to play. Kenny Moore made two free throws to make it a three-point lead. Murray State again turned the ball over on a long inbounds pass and Jordan Cyphers made one of two free throws to seal the upset. “I’m very proud of our young men to be able to come here and win on the road,” Cooper said. “It is certainly not an easy place to play, a packed house and a team that just stuck to it. There was a point where we were down 12 points in the second half but yet, and still for whatever reason, we hung in there.”

Practice makes perfect?

Hopkinsville swimmers begin region meet today

BY JOE WILSON
NEW ERA SPORTS EDITOR

Hopkinsville High School swim coach Keith Marquess knows that her sport is the only one where an athlete practices 10,000 times more than they compete. Now she's hoping all that practice pays off with a Western Kentucky Regional Swim Meet title. The meet begins at 12:45 p.m. today at the Owensboro Health Park with 24 teams competing for berths in the state swimming and diving meet Feb. 23-25 at the University of Louisville. “I have become a wreck to be around the last week,” said Marquess on Thursday afternoon. “I have been hard to live with and I know it. I don’t know what is going to happen but I want the kids to do well. I don’t even know why I’m upset because what is going to happen is going to happen.” Marquess said Bowling Green is the solid favorite to win both the boys’ and girls’ region titles. Owensboro Catholic and Greenwood are the top challengers in the boys’ meet. Greenwood and Murray are among the top girls’ squads. The veteran Hoptown coach said her team is still young and she hopes to get her younger swimmers some experience in the second day on Saturday. “We have a lot of kids seeded sixth and we want them to move up the first day,” Marquess said. “I don’t think there is any way we can be an automatic bid because there is a 10-second difference in last year’s relays and this years. We’re hoping for some at-large bids so the kids are still going to have to swim fast.” The top two finishers in each event earn automatic bids to the state tournament. Then from the remaining five regions, the next 22 fastest times earn at-large bids. The Lady Tigers’ 200-yard medley relay team of Samantha Stephenson, Nikki Shouse, Michaela Langhi and Jenna Snyder and the 200-yard freestyle relay team of Zena Maddux, Snyder, Langhi and Shouse are seeded sixth. Marquess said Grey Campbell and John Morgan Francis are her most solid male swimmers. Her 200-yard freestyle and 400-yard freestyle relay teams of Nick Montejos, Austin Mason, Campbell and Francis have enjoyed a good season and could be in the hunt for an at-large bid. “The bottom line is we have to swim our butts off,” Marquess said. “We need to go up and race hard on Friday and then race harder on Saturday. Saturday’s finals begin at 11:30 a.m. Admission for the meet is $3.

Hoptown girls rout Ohio County

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

The Hopkinsville Lady Tigers had three players in double figures and routed visiting Ohio County 58-40 Thursday night in a girls’ high school basketball game. Despite the victory, Hoptown (23-4) lost point guard J’Lynn Majors in the second quarter when she went down with an ankle injury. “I don’t think it’s terrible,” said Tonya Wells, who will open District 8 tournament play in less than two weeks. “She may be out a week.” Majors was injured driving to the basket when two Ohio County players made contact with her. Christy Soldo led Hoptown with 19 points. However, the senior had plenty of offensive support with Ashley Cole and Haley Cook adding 14 and 12 points, respectively. “I was really surprised because we scrimmaged them and it was a much closer game,” Wells said. “I really was expecting a lot harder game. I was pleasantly surprised we won that easily.” Hoptown blew open the game by outscoring the Lady Eagles 23-12 in the second quarter to take a 35-22 halftime advantage.

Titans agree on multi-year deal with OT Mike Otto

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Titans have agreed to terms on a multi-year deal with offensive tackle Mike Otto, trimming the number of their pending free agents to 16. The Titans announced Thursday they had reached a deal. Tennessee drafted Otto in the seventh round out of Purdue in 2007. Otto has played 41 games in five seasons with the Titans, and he started a game at right tackle in 2011 against Tampa Bay when David Stewart was injured. Otto had been set to become a free agent March 13.

UNC's Strickland has reconstructive surgery

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina junior Dexter Strickland has had surgery to repair a knee injury that will sideline him the rest of the season. Strickland had reconstructive surgery Thursday on his torn right anterior cruciate ligament as well as damaged meniscus. Strickland was hurt on a drive to the basket in the Tar Heels' win at Virginia Tech on Jan. 19. The school says Strickland recovery time has yet to be determined. Strickland started the first 19 games for the fifth-ranked Tar Heels. He was the team's top perimeter defender and No. 2 ballhandler while averaging about eight points per game.

Manning takes workout regimen to Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Colts quarterback Peyton Manning and Rockies outfielder Todd Helton have been working out at Duke this week, an athletic department spokesman says Thursday. The spokesman said both are there primarily to visit David Cutcliffe, who was Tennessee's offensive coordinator when both were college quarterbacks. The cover was blown earlier Thursday when Matt Skura, a Duke football player, wrote on Twitter that he was "stretching" next to Manning. The post was later taken down. Manning has spent the past five months recovering from his third neck surgery in less than two years, and there have been conflicting reports about how much progress the only four-time league MVP has made. Manning's doctor has cleared him to resume playing, although Colts owner Jim Irsay says he has not yet passed the team's physical.

Texas Rangers, Cruz strike $16M, 2-year contract

(AP) — Nelson Cruz seems to be a perfect fit for the Texas Rangers with his potent bat and big personality. With hopes of staying together even longer, AL championship series MVP Cruz and two-time defending AL champion Texas avoided arbitration by agreeing Thursday to a $16 million, two-year contract. The deal, negotiated for Cruz by agents Sam and Seth Levinson, came eight days before a scheduled arbitration hearing. It includes another potential $500,000 in performance bonuses and takes the 31-year-old slugger through his final two seasons of salary-arbitration eligibility.

Ohio State trustees get compliance review report

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A report given to an Ohio State board of trustees committee Thursday recommends that the university hire a vice president to oversee a new office and new committee responsible for monitoring ethics and rules compliance across the university system. The report by consultants is a response to the school's football memorabilia scandal that led to the resignation of coach Jim Tressel, but its recommendations would apply to numerous departments including athletics. The trustees' audit committee accepted the recommendations, and they head to the full board on Friday.

Hopkins County Central sends Fort Campbell to 6th straight loss

The Fort Campbell Falcons dropped their sixth straight boys' basketball game Thursday night at Hopkins County Central, 88-62. The loss dropped Fort Campbell to 4-16 overall while Hopkins County Central improved to 9-18. Fort Campbell returns to action tonight at home against Madisonville-North Hopkins. The Falcons played the game without coach John Cunningham, who was ejected from a game earlier this month against Trigg County was forced to sit out the teams' next three games.

Gasol, Lakers block Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — Pau Gasol blocked Ray Allen's putback attempt at the buzzer in overtime and the Los Angeles Lakers held on to beat the Boston Celtics 88-87 on Thursday night. Gasol finished with 25 points and 14 rebounds, and Andrew Bynum had 16 points and 17 rebounds to help the Lakers snap a two-game losing streak. Allen scored 22 points and Kevin Garnett had 12 points and 12 rebounds for Boston, which had won five in a row and nine of its previous 10 games. But Garnett was 6 for 23 from the field and Paul Pierce was 7 for 18, including a clean-look jumper at the end of overtime. It rimmed out and Allen tried to push the rebound in, but Gasol got his fingertips on it and it floated away as the buzzer sounded. The Lakers had lost six of their last seven games on the road. But a trip to Boston to play the rival Celtics was just what they needed. Both teams shot under 40 percent, and they each missed twice to start the overtime before Bryant sank a jumper that gave the Lakers an 84-82 lead with 3:30 left. Allen missed, then Steve Blake made a jumper to give the Lakers a four-point lead — their biggest of the game. Pierce made a jumper and, after Gasol missed, Pierce hit a 3-pointer over Metta World Peace to make it 87-86 Boston. Bryant missed, but Bynum tipped it in with 1:30 left to give L.A. the lead, and it held up. Pierce finished with 18 points, nine rebounds and seven assists. Bynum converted a three-point play to give the Lakers an 80-79 lead with 2:39 left in regulation, and it stayed that way through several trips down the floor before the Celtics called timeout with 1:16 left. After the inbounds pass, Allen made a catch-and-shoot 3-pointer to put Boston into the lead. World Peace missed a 3. Garnett grabbed the rebound and the "Beat L.A.!" chants began in the TD Garden. But Garnett missed a jumper and Gasol tipped in Bryant's miss to tie it 82-82. The Celtics had a chance to win it in regulation, but Pierce got trapped near midcourt and Pietrus was forced to fire up a no-chance 30-footer at the buzzer. The Celtics led by nine points in the first quarter, but the Lakers erased the deficit in the second and briefly took a one-point lead at 38-37. Boston led 64-59 when Gasol converted a three-point play and Bryant made back-to-back jumpers to give Los Angeles a 66-64 lead.

NHL

Ottawa edges Preds

OTTAWA (AP) — Chris Phillips scored his first two goals of the season in his 1,000th NHL game, Jason Spezza also scored twice and the Ottawa Senators ended a seven-game losing streak with a 4-3 win over the Nashville Predators on Thursday night. Phillips scored his first goal in 75 games 7:50 into the second. He lay on his back on the ice after adding a power-play goal 13:35 into the third to put Ottawa up by two. It was his fourth two-goal game — his first since Nov. 19, 2009, in a 6-2 win over Pittsburgh. That was his 800th career game. The veteran defenseman has spent his entire career with the Senators, who drafted him first overall in 1996. His No. 4 jersey was painted on the ice behind both goals and he was given standing ovations during a video tribute in the first period and after both goals. Mike Fisher, who played his first game at Scotiabank Place since he was traded to Nashville last Feb. 10, was also given a standing ovation moments later when video highlights from his Senators career were shown. Fisher's wife, singer Carrie Underwood, was on hand for the game. Alex Auld made 24 saves for Ottawa, which went 13-2-2 prior to its recent skid. Martin Erat scored to draw the Predators within one with 8.6 seconds remaining.

GOLF

3 tied at 9-under 63 to lead at Pebble Beach

Matthew Goggin hits off the fourth tee of the Monterey Peninsula course during the first round of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf tournament Thursday in Pebble Beach, Calif.

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Twenty months later, Dustin Johnson finally hit the drive he wanted at Pebble Beach. Ten years later, Tiger Woods must have wondered what kept him away from the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

On a spectacular day of scenery and scoring, Johnson blasted a tee shot on the third hole at Pebble Beach and then pitched in for eagle from 41 yards in front of the green. He added another eagle on his way to a 9-under 63 and a three-way tie atop the leaderboard Thursday.

Woods was five shots to par out of the lead, a solid start to his PGA Tour season. He had six birdies in a 4-under 68 at Spyglass Hill, the fourth-best score on that course. Spyglass was hardest of the three courses, though not by much. The weather was so pure that all three courses played about one shot under par.

Charlie Wi was over at Monterey Peninsula and had a shot at 59 without ever knowing it. Wi was 8 under after a tap-in birdie on the 13th hole, and needed only three birdies in the last five holes. Trouble is, he had no idea the Shore Course was a 70. He made one more birdie and had a 9-under 61.

Joining them was former U.S. Amateur Danny Lee, who holed a bunker shot for eagle at No. 2 and holed out from the 11th fairway with a wedge for another eagle to match Johnson at 9-under 63.

Johnson is turning into his generation's "Prince of Pebble." He won the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in 2009 and 2010, and then had a three-shot lead at Pebble in the 2010 U.S. Open until he shot 82 in the final round. On the third hole of that round, he hit driver left into the bushes for a lost ball and made double bogey. On Thursday, he smashed a driver nearly 340 yards over the trees to just short of the green, setting up eagle. Even now, he still thinks about that tee shot in the U.S. Open.

■Dubai Desert Classic: In Dubai, United

Arab Emirates, Rafael Cabrera-Bello made nine birdies in his first 11 holes to finish at 9-under 63 Thursday for a two-shot lead after the first round of the Dubai Desert Classic.

Marcel Siem and Scott Jamieson each shot 65.

U.S. Open Champion Rory McIlroy was three shots back, making seven birdies on the last 10 holes.

■Women's Australian Open: In Melbourne, Australia, American Stacy Lewis and Australia's Sarah Kemp shared the Women's Australian Open lead at 4-under 69 on Thursday, leaving top-ranked Yani Tseng a stroke back in her bid to win the event for the third straight year.

Lewis, the Kraft Nabisco winner last year, had six birdies and two bogeys in the LPGA Tour opener at historic Royal Melbourne, the 2011 Presidents Cup venue that is hosting a women's professional event for the first time.

What is this leading question leading to?

DEAR AMY: I have been out of the workforce for 10 years while being a stay-at-home mom to our son. I recently have interviewed for evenings, nights and/or weekends positions (my husband would watch our son).

During all of these interviews, I have been asked, point-blank, "Do you have children?" My initial thought is, "Can you really ask me that?!" The first time I was posed this question, I replied, "Yes, I am a mother, and child care is not a problem."

Of course, I don't want to initiate a confrontation on a job interview. I want to be considered based on my education and experience, not whether I have a child.

What do you think my reply should be? — Eager to Be Employed

DEAR EAGER: I shared your letter with Justine Lissner, lawyer and spokeswoman for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in Washington (eoc.gov).

ASK AMY

AMY DICKINSON

Your question is understandable — and valid. Lissner says: "It is illegal to treat women differently from men. While the question itself of whether you have children is not illegal if posed to both men and women, our experience is that it is most likely usually posed only to women, which is illegal."

On the other hand, I think it's possible an employer might pose this question to both men and women for jobs on the late shift.

Lissner and I agree your answer was good, truthful and anticipated what the employer was really getting at. However, you could have responded: "Why do you ask? Is being a parent an advantage or a disadvantage?"

You can turn this into a pitch by saying: "My parenting explains my employment gap of 10 years. But I hope you'll see from my educational and professional background that I can definitely do the job. And you know that as a mother I am used to working long hours — I'm extremely reliable, motivated and ready to go."

God's love never changes, even in hard times

DEAR REV. GRAHAM: I can understand how God might send hard times to people who aren't religious so they'll turn to Him, but why would He send hard times to people who are already close to Him? Religious people seem to suffer just as much as non-religious people, don't they? — Ms. D.L.

DEAR Ms. D.L.: God has not promised that we will be exempt from problems and suffering, just because we believe in Him. Christians get cancer and have accidents and suffer heartaches just like everyone else. Jesus said that God "sends rain on the righteous and the unrighteous" (Matt. 5:45).

In fact, we may be called upon to endure even more suffering because we belong to Christ. Jesus warned, "No servant is greater than his master: If they persecuted me, they will persecute you also" (John 15:20). It may be the simple scorn of a former friend — or for believers in some parts of the world today, it can mean imprisonment and death because of their faith. The Bible urges us to pray for those who are persecuted for their faith in Christ — and we need to heed its command (see Heb. 13:3).

Does this mean God has forgotten us when hard times come? Not at all. God's love never changes; He loves us when times are pleasant — and He loves us just as much when times are hard. No matter what we're going through, we can turn to Him for strength and encouragement.

We don't always know why God allows hard times to come to us, but we all experience them, and when we do, our response should be one of faith and trust. Remember: Jesus knows what it is to suffer — for He endured the suffering of the cross.
